TRACY BECKERMAN

"A Momoir: Lost in Suburbia: How I got pregnant, moved to the burbs, lost my way and got my cool back"

TRACY BECKERMAN writes the syndicated column, LOST IN SUBURBIA, which is carried by over 400 newspapers nationally. Combined with her blog by the same name, she reaches up to ten million readers weekly. Tracy has made frequent TV and radio appearances speaking about motherhood and how to be a cool mom in the "burbs", some of which include The Today Show on NBC, The CBS Early Show, LX New York and The Balancing Act. She was recently selected as America's Top Blogger by The Balancing Act on Lifetime Television and appears on the show regularly.

Tracy is also the author of the book, "Rebel without a Minivan: Observations on Life in the 'burbs" and a contributor to the humor compilation, "See Mom Run: Side-Splitting Essays from the World's Most Harried Moms." Her second book, "Lost in Suburbia: A Momoir" will be published in 2013. Prior to her life as a humor columnist, Tracy was a writer and producer in the television industry, creating award-winning TV and radio scripts for such clients as Lifetime Television, WCBS-TV, CBS and NBC. Her honors for writing include The Erma Bombeck Humor Writers Award, a Writer's Guild of America award, a CLIO and a New York Emmy.

Lunch will be served during the lecture.
